

'Teak - The natural choice.'

TEAK

It is truly a beautiful photograph, one that captures a garden or courtyard graced with Indonesian Teak furniture. Oozing with character and charm, your outdoor setting becomes the envy of every visitor. Indonesian Teak outdoor furniture is a much loved choice for many other reasons too.

LOW MAINTENANCE. You don't have to do anything to maintain the wood. Just leave it. Left untouched nature's elements caress and mature it over time. Rather like a fine wine, the timber ages gracefully into wonderful looking pieces with deep rich character and a soft grey patina colouring (as seen in the image to the left.)

WARMTH. For those who love the gentle golden honey glow of oiled Teak, you have the option of purchasing pre-oiled teak furniture and lightly oiling your pieces every 6 to 12 months, just enough to maintain the rich honey-brown flavours. Oil intensifies the colours and grain patterns, but seek an expert's advice to get the best results. There are tricks to obtaining the best outcome. Strange as it may seem though, oiling your Teak outdoor furniture doesn't make it last longer, it is purely an aesthetics choice.

RESISTANT. Indonesian Teak is naturally rich in oils and minerals, which almost act like a barrier to the more harmful effects of the elements. It resists rotting, splitting, buckling, and insects find it quite a turn off, so you're safe placing chairs and tables directly on your lawn. Also having a naturally high oil texture and tight grains, it doesn't cause metals to rust when the two are in contact.

LONG LASTING. Because of its naturally resistant qualities, Teak outlives plastic or softwood outdoor furniture.

LIGHT. Most pieces are generally light and easily transportable to different locations in your backyard paradise, or stacked and stored during winter if you so desire.

Aged Teak

CONSTRUCTION

All of Schots teak furniture is built to last a lifetime, using mortise and tenon construction with marine epoxy glues. We thoroughly check all of our teak furniture to ensure you are receiving only the finest quality teak available. Butterfly joints are used on all round edges to achieve the strongest joint possible.

Teak furniture is built with durability in mind. Furniture sections are sanded and fitted into place. Traditional joinery techniques are used simply because they have proven superior. Using mortise and tenon joints with teak dowels that expand in place and hold sections firmly together. The dowels lock in and prevent any creaking in the joint, denying movement and flexing.

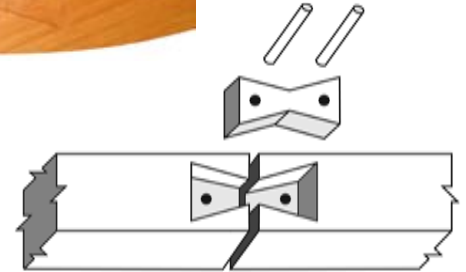

Brass screws and threaded brass inserts are used wherever folding joints are required because of their rustproof qualities. Solid teak plugs are used to cover brass screws where required.

Solid brass rods are also used in folding joints to ensure strength and a lifetime of outdoor use. This unique feature also allows the chairs to be folded easily for storage. Tabletops that open have solid brass dowels for strength and ease extension opening and closing, ensuring a tight fit.
